Two River Theater Company Extends Macbeth

Horror show now scheduled to run
January 15 – February 10, 2008

RED BANK, NJ - Due to early interest and the high volume of advanced ticket sales, Two River Theater Company has extended its winter production of Macbeth by William Shakespeare. Eight shows, including three already sold out student matinees, have been added to the original performance schedule. Conceived and directed by Teller (of Penn & Teller) and Artistic Director Aaron Posner, this bloody horror show with magic designed by Teller, will now run from January 15 through February 10, 2008.

"We are thrilled with the response," says Posner. "I'm excited to work with Teller and this amazing group of artists from all over the country. We have an incredible cast, world-class designers, magic consultants, Hollywood mask-makers, composers, percussionists, a fight choreographer, plus two dramaturgs. This is the biggest, most complex, most ambitious production Two River Theater Company has ever done. It is a huge undertaking...and an incredibly exciting one."

Posner has promised to reimagine Shakespeare's bloody masterpiece as a chilling and hallucinatory supernatural horror story. This co-production with the Folger Theatre in Washington, DC is sponsored in part by Monmouth University.

The additional performances include three student matinees at 10am on Tuesday, February 5; Wednesday, February 6; and Thursday, February 7; three evening performances at 8pm on Thursday, February 7; Friday, February 8; and Saturday, February 9; and two weekend matinees at 3pm on Saturday, February 9 and Sunday February 10.
